It is the Only Time on Record.

From the Chicago Tribune.

It happened on a train traveling in the direction of one of the Northwestern summer resorts. The party was made up of Chicago busi-ness men, off for a brief outing, and one member of it was-well, an official of one of the Chicago gas companies. One man had brought along a pack of cards and some chips, and so the party settled down some chips, and so the party settled down in the smoking compartment of the sleeping car for a quiet game of draw poker.

The game was just getting interesting when one of the players suddenly laid down his cards and exclaimed:

"By George! I forgot all about it."

He took a pocket calendar from his pocket, looked at it, and added:

"It's the last day, too."

"It's your edge," said one of the players.

"Hold on a minute!" was the response,
"Hold on a minute!" was the response,
"I've got to fix this."
He took a little piece of paper out of his pocket, and after a glance at it counted out some poker chips and pushed them with the piece of paper over to the gas official.
"I save my discount," he said.

gas official.

"I save my discount," he said.

"But, my dear sir, I'm not a collector," said the gas company official.

"It's the 12th of the month, and I tender you the money as an official of the company," persisted the man. "Now, gentlemen, two calls five. Go on with the game."

Ten minutes later he had won the chirs back and some more with them. "Let it go on record," he said triumphanty. "Ive gotten ahead of a gas company once."

A New Duty for Policemen. From the San Francisco Chronicle

A cable car was running down O'Far-rell street the other day at full speed, when suddenly a 5-year-old child ran equarely in front of it in pursuit of a ball with which it had been playing. The grip-man rang his bell, yelled and put on the brakes as tight as he could, while the ladies on the front of the car went into hysteries as they saw in imagination the little form mangled beneath the wheels. But all the hubbub did not worry the youngster a bit, and he continued calmy youngster a bit, and he continued calmy to search for the plaything he had lost. Then one of the bravest appeared on the scene just in the nick of time, and, jumping into the middle of the street, he grabbed the child just as the ear had almost reached him. The gentleman of the blue coat and brass buttons was evidently a family man himself and knew how to apply an ounce of prevention in the most effective manner, for he promptly reversed the youth across his knee as if he were accustomed thereto and then and there gave the scatter-brained infant a good, sound old-fashioned spanking, the memory of which will linger for days to come. Then, with a smile to the ladies, who had witnessed the outcome of their fright with more or less satisfaction he deposited the well-spanked child on the sidewalk and resumed his beat in the proud consciousness of a duty well parlormed.

He Suddenly Changed His Mind. From the Chicago Tribune.

The conductor of the open car was chatting pleasantly with a passenger on the rear seat when he noticed the young man next the passenger take out a note the conversation and let the passenger ramble along as he pleased, while he peered over the young man's shoulder.

The writing, however, was too small to be deciphered from that distance.

When the young man put up his notebook the conductor shuffled nervously back and forth on the rear platform, tried to whistle, and neglected to stop the car for two women who were running down. for two women who were running down a side street waving their parasols. And the young man seemed to have a strange fascination for him.

"Finally he stopped just back of the young man and said with a nervous laugh."

lauch:
"Well, it's my last trip, anyway."
"Yes?" said the young man, interroga-

"Oh, yes. I'd made up my mind to resign. I don't like the business".
"No?" queried the young man, disinter-
